Will Hold For 8 cents.

The tobacco situation in the stem-ming district composed of the counties of Henderson, Webster, Union, Crittenden and Hopkins, is at present rather tense, as there seems to be but very little probability of the buyers and the producers getting together on prices. Up to the present time, so far as has been learned, not a pound of tobacco has been sold this season in any of the counties of the association.

The Imperial Tobacco Company has made an offer of 7 cents a pound for a few million pounds, but there is a string tied to the offer.

At meetings held this week it was generally agreed that no tobacco should be sold by the pool for less than 8 cents a pound.

BOY CHAMPION ASPHYXIATED

Lester Bryant, Who Won Prize As Corn Grower, Found Dead In Room at Washington.

HE BLEW OUT THE GAS

Department of Agriculture Will Ship Body to His Kentucky Home.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The body of Lester Bryant, the Kentucky champion corn grower, who died yesterday from the effects of gas, was taken in charge by officials of Department of Agriculture, who are greatly distressed over the affair.

It will be sent to Kentucky for burial. Bryant, who was 15 years, old, was found dead on the floor of his room at 301 Delaware Avenue, death evidently resulting from escaping gas. The odor of gas was detected by others in the house and was traced to the room occupied by Bryant.

When the door was broken down he was found on the floor, where, the police believe, he had fallen while trying to get out of the room. It is thought, Bryant, on retiring at night, may have blown out the gas instead of turning it off.

Bryant came to Washington Sunday from Rockfield, Ky.

From a button in the lapel of his coat it was ascertained that he was a member of the Boys' Corn Club, which is spending a week in Washington. He was one of the prize winners in the corn growing contest conducted by the Department of Agriculture.

He was accompanied to Louisville by his father, W. E. Bryant. A Louisville man had given the prize in a desire to promote the agricultural welfare of the state.

Bryant had received $300 in profits and prizes. He had succeeded in producing 149 bushels of corn to one acre at a profit of $70.33. In addition to the trip to Washington, he had been given other prizes.

ACME MILLS RESUMES

New Owners Begin Business With Full Force of Employees.

GIVES GENERAL SATISFACTION

Big 400-Horse Power Engine Put In Motion Tuesday.

A last stride in the progress of the city's enterprise was regained last Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock, when the 400-horse power engine was started up by former engineer James Moore. With the first throb of the engine, all the machinery in Mill B took on new life and soon snow-white flour was pouring from the grist spouts and was transferred to the packers. Head miller Collins and his assistants had overhauled the entire mill machinery, and everything moved off without a hitch.

Everybody will rejoice that the mills are again running, and will continue to run from now on. This means much to the farming community as well as to Hopkinsville. There need be no fear for the future history of the mill, and farmers will have a new purchaser for their wheat crop this year.

Singing "Marching Through Georgia" in Public Schools.

Prof. Davis A. Clark, Superintendent of the City Public Schools, was seen last Tuesday relative to the protest of the daughters of the confederacy against teaching the children in the schools to sing "Marching through Georgia." Prof. Clark said he had fully investigated the matter and that this song has been sung in only part of one school and there only once this school year, but as he believed anything that is offensive to the people should not be countenanced that he will see that the offense is not repeated in the future.

Prof. Clark's prompt acquiescence to the request of the Daughters of the Confederacy is to be highly commended and the teachers will readily comply with his decision in the matter.

No Profit in Alligators.

The difficulty about raising alligators to supply the demand for the animals and skins is that they do not attain full growth for about 100 years. The skin of the six or seven-year-old animal is available, however, for many practical purposes. There is one on a farm at Palm Beach which measures 18 feet in length and is said to be about 900 years old. There are several of these farms in operation at the present time, but the industry will not be really profitable until the wild alligators become scarcer.

Smithson & Everitt, FUNERAL DIRECTORS.

Made His Blessing Retroactive.

The father of a family who had been striving to bring up his children in the way they should go was very much annoyed at his son's uncouth habit of helping himself to a few bites before grace had been said. The stereotyped form called for: "A blessing on what we are about to eat," but one occasion being particularly exasperating, he astounded the young man by adding to his petition, "and on that which has already been eaten."

Quite Another Thing.

"What makes you so sleepy today, old man?" "I was up at 4 this morning?" "Come off! You never got up at 4 in your life." "I didn't say I got up; I said I was up."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Child-Training.

It is not fair to a small child for the parents or nurse to be careless about the little things that develop thoughtfulness, self-reliance and self-control in a child. Self-control is a characteristic absolutely essential to manhood or womanhood, and it is not learned in a day. It is the result of patient teaching and training through all the long years of babyhood and childhood.

"TIS AN ILL WIND"

How Fate Spun a Thread That Changed Life of Man Who Had Given Up Hope.

When Stephen Ward started for Arizona in search of health he departed saturated with repulsion for the "wild and woolly." He preferred to remain a member of the exclusive Back Bay set, with but two years of life to his credit, than to spend an eternity alone in "the land that God forgot."

With each revolution of the wheels which bore him away from his interests his hatred for the desolate country increased, and by the time he reached Prescott he hadn't a civil answer for any one unfortunate enough to address him.

Several "Biddy Friendlies" (who occupied the sections adjacent to his) tried to become "chummy," but when he stared absent-mindedly at the landscape, totally ignoring their witty remarks, they pronounced him a "sphinx" and let him alone.

He reached his destination in the gray dawn, and was welcomed by William Benton, the engineer from his father's mine, located at Lost Creek, twelve miles south of Prescott.

Stephen climbed into the stage, and during the drive gave monosyllabic answers to Mr. Benton's many questions. He remembered but two facts of the worthy gentleman's conversation—namely, that a cabin had been built for him high up on the ridge and that he would have to cook his own meals until some one could be found to do it for him.

The next morning found him installed in his hermitage, and rebellion more bitter than wormwood gnawed at his heartstrings. What pleasure remained in life separated from all that made it worth while? His career was ended! He realized this when he turned the key in his office door. Obviously fate meant to torture him with loneliness until life became unbearable, and he would welcome the journey's end.

Two months after his arrival he stood at the door of his cabin and watched the menacing gray-black pall of clouds as it rose like heavy smoke from behind the snow-crowled peaks. Thunder belled and lightning zigzagged across the heavens, while the wind lashed the patriarchal trees until they groaned.

With this first storm came a more forceful realization of his isolation. Then fate spun another thread and Stephen's future was changed. During a brief lull of the tumult he heard the whinny of a horse and impulsively answered with the whoo-who call so frequently used in that country.

Then he started down the trail, and, aided by a vivid flash of lightning, discovered a girl astride a horse. For a minute they gazed speechless at one another, and then the girl stammered, "I—I—think I have lost my way, or does this trail lead to Lost Creek?"

"No; you should have taken the other road two miles down the mountain. This leads to my cabin, no further." Just then a few raindrops, the advance guard of the tempest, fell as a warning, and Stephen realized the full extent of her plight.

"You must dismount and we will make for my cabin."

Grasping the horse's bridle, he led the way, the girl following without comment. They entered the cabin and Stephen lit the lamp, then threw another log on the fire. The rain descended in torrents, beating against the door like a frenzied fiend.

The girl shivered. "You cannot imagine how relieved I was to hear your call. I felt instinctively that this was the wrong trail, yet hoped for a familiar landmark to guide me. You see, I teach school on the ridge and live at Prescott. When Harry and I started for home the storm advanced so rapidly I knew we couldn't make it, so decided to stay with Mrs. Benton at Lost Creek. Thank you so much for giving us shelter."

During the narrative Stephen had ample time to note that his guest was pretty, petite and interesting.

"You are very welcome to any comforts my poor shack affords. I was just about to cook my evening meal when the storm demanded my attention. I am favored to have some one to share it."

Stephen was also good to look upon, and as he moved about in the firelight, placing the coffee pot on a bed of live coals and frying the ham and eggs, she silently admired the tall, strong, little figure, and wondered why he lived in the cabin.

While serving the meal he gave her the explanation, also told her of his loneliness and how time lagged with nothing to look forward to. "This has been a rare treat for me. You are my first visitor. Mr. Benton is my commissary and comes twice a week, but you are a really, truly guest."

They had not noticed that the storm had abated until three loud knocks on the door disturbed their conversation. It was Benton with the supplies.

After hearing how the girl had taken the wrong trail when bound for his home, he laughed and said, "Well, well, Mr. Ward, I'll warrant you were well entertained. Miss Martin is a great favorite with us. Now, like a bad ogre, I'm going to take her home with me."

Stephen glanced at the girl. "Will you come again?" he asked with a please-do look in his eyes.

"Yes, some time, perhaps Mr. Benton will be kind enough to allow me to accompany him. Goodby, and thank you for sheltering me."

He stood in the doorway and watched until a bend in the trail hid them from sight. Then he drank a deep, full draft of the life-giving air, and began anticipating her next visit.—Jean Douglas, in the Buffalo Express.

ORIGIN OF THE HEEL.

It is said that the heels now worn on shoes had their origin in Persia, where they took the form of flat wood on sandals to raise the feet and protect them from the hot sands.

It was many years afterward that this fashion was introduced into Venice, but the reason for its adoption in this case is said to have been quite different. Here the originators of the fashion were jealous husbands who reasoned that their ladies thus equipped would not venture far outside the precincts of their dwelling. These heels were called "clogs," and in order to satisfy the vanity of the wearers and perhaps to sweeten the pill—that is, the discomfort of appearing in them—they were elaborately adorned, sometimes being incrustated with gold and silver. The height of the clogs determined the rank of the wearer.—Harper's Weekly.

MUNICH ROYALTY IS MODEST.

As far as meeting royalty is concerned, Munich is a great contrast to Berlin. It is impossible to stay long in the Prussian capital without having one's path stopped or impeded by the passing of some prince of the royal house or at all events by the cohorts of police who safeguard them. One may stay for months in Munich without seeing more than a royal carriage driving past, almost unnoticed except for the raising of hats. The popularity of the Wittelsbachs is genuine, and every Munich takes a lively interest in the ways and doings of the members of the royal house. The tragic history of the Wittelsbachs in recent times is perhaps the reason why the personalities of the present generation seem somewhat effaced. They at all events take care not to stand in the limelight.

SPREADING THE FLAMES.

Editor (to new reporter)—"You say in this report of the fire that 'the lurid glare of forked flames shot athwart the dark-domed sky.' Are you sure of that?"

New Reporter—Yes, sir; I saw the whole thing.

Editor—Did you notice any insurance men looking about the place, or learn what caused the fire, or the probable amount of property destroyed?

New Reporter—No, sir.

Editor (striking match)—Well, just watch the lurid glare of forked flames athwart this report!—Liverpool Mercury.

JEFFERSON AS AN INVENTOR.

Thomas Jefferson invented the folding campstool, the revolving office chair, the two-wheeled sulky, the copying press, the pedometer, a hemp lamp, and a very convenient improvement on the plows used in his day. Of all these ingenious contrivances the plow received the greatest notice, a gold medal having been awarded it in Paris in 1790. Eighteen years later the Royal Agricultural Society of the Seine, to which he had presented the original plow, sent him a superb up-to-date plow containing his improvement.

CORRESPONDENT'S HARD LUCK

Scotch Newspaper Man Naturally Re-sentful Over His Treatment at the Hands of the Bulgarians.

Angus Hamilton, the Scotch Londoner, who tried to be a war correspondent with the Turkish army, seems to have had no trouble with the courteous Moslems. But when he got over the lines by mistake and fell into the hands of the gentle Christianized Bulgarians he was tortured for hours, beaten about the face, threatened with death and declared to be a Turk and not an Englishman. This was adding insult to injury. A true Briton finds having his bound arms twisted behind him, and having a loaded revolver held at his head for hours and denial of food and drink mild by comparison with having his nationality doubted.

Angus Hamilton was let loose after his identification papers were examined at the Bulgarian headquarters. He is not injured for life. He must charge up to profit and loss the experience he has undergone. The war correspondent isn't really a completed product of civilization till he has suffered some such barbarities. Hamilton knows now that General Sherman was right about war. But he knows also that no war Sherman knew anything about was so deserving of eschatological exploitation as the one that the Balkan allies are now prosecuting against the Turks, who treated Hamilton so politely while he was with them.—Brooklyn Eagle.

PILGRIMS A BAND OF HEROES

Their Worth Properly Set Forth by Rufus Choate in Words of Vivid Eloquence.

Do you not think that whose could, by adequate description, bring before you that winter of the pilgrims—their brief sunshine; the nights of storm, slow waning; the damp and icy breath, felt to the pillow of the dying; its destitutions, its contrasts with all their former experience in life, its utter insulation and loneliness, its deathbeds and burials, its memories, its apprehensions, its hopes; the consultations of the prudent; the prayers of the pious; the occasional cheerful hymn, in which the strong heart threw off its burden, and, asserting its unvanquished nature, went up, like a bird of dawn, to the skies—do ye not think that whose could describe them calmly waiting in that defile, lonelier and darker than Thermopylae, for a morning that might never dawn, or might show them, when it did, a mightier arm than the Persian raised as in act to strike, would he not sketch a scene of more difficult and rarer heroism? A scene, as Wordsworth has said, "melancholy, yea, dismal, yet consolatory and full of joy;" a scene even better fitted to succor, to exalt, to lead the forlorn hopes of all great causes, till time shall be no more!—Rufus Choate.

BERMUDA "WHITE HOUSES."

Bermuda is the original home of the "White House." The simplest bungalow is built of the same material as the most pretentious villa, in almost precisely the same way. White coral blocks cut from the backbone of the islands are used for all building purposes. Many of the well-to-do negroes live in lovely little white coral bungalows and cottages, which for vivid, radiant whiteness would surpass the executive mansion at Washington. Paint cannot rival the dazzling luster of Bermuda's lime-washed coral buildings, shimmering as they do in the brilliant sub-tropical sunshine like pillars of light.

HOW SHE VOTED.

At a luncheon in New York Dr. Lynan Abbott, sipping a glass of ice-cold milk, told a woman suffrage story.

"I heard a lot," he said, "about the wonderful success of woman suffrage in Australia; so, meeting an Australian woman one day, I asked:

"How did you vote, madam, at the last election?"

"The Australian woman answered, with a simper:

"In my mauve pinner gown, sir, with a large mauve hat trimmed with opreys."—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Effect of One Bottle.

Crandall, Tex.—"After my last spell of sickness," writes Mrs. Belle Teal, of this city, "I remained very ill, and stayed in bed for eight weeks. I couldn't get up, all this time, and though my doctor came to see me every day, he didn't do me any good. I had taken but one bottle of Cardui, when I was up, going everywhere, and seen I was doing all my housework." Cardui helps when other medicines have failed, because it contains ingredients not found in any other medicine. Pure, safe, reliable, gentle-acting—Cardui is the ideal medicinal tonic for weak sick women. Try it.

GERMAN ARMY READY

Magnificent Force Awaits the One Word, "Mobilize!"

Nearly Four Million Trained Soldiers Would Be Put in Simultaneous Motion When in Time of Peril the Kaiser Orders.

Mobilization! Red proclamations appear at every street corner, post office, railway station and crossroads throughout Germany. The telegraph carries the word to distant corners of the empire. Messengers speed on bicycles and in motor cars dash through the streets. Couriers gallop along country roads. The wheels of factories and mills stop with a jerk. Every industry and peaceful vocation is affected.

Rolls of drums, the clarion notes of bugles and waving flags; cheers mingling with weeping and sobbing from almost every home, as a nation's mothers, wives and children bid farewell to husbands, sons and brothers.

A forest of bayonets begins to move. Endless lines of cannon and munition wagons rumble along. That the soldier may be strong, sentiment is ruthlessly crushed. That the sight of weeping loved ones whom he may never see again shall not dishearten him, a cordon of police surrounds the railway station. To the uninitiated everything is confusion; only the trained one sees the wheels of a vast machine that works almost without a hitch.

The word "mobilization." It has the greatest "thrill" of any word in the German or French language.

Each Knows Where to Go.

In Germany only the emperor can write that word officially, and by it is Germany's peace force of 600,000 men turned into an army of more than four million. Every one of the three and a half million "ex-soldiers" is instructed twice yearly as to the day, hour and place he must report immediately upon learning that "mobilization" has been ordered. Every owner of a motor car, duly registered with the military authorities, has orders when, where and at what hour he must turn it over for military purposes, with a full set of extra tires, specified quantity of gasoline, oil and repair kit. Every sound horse is registered and subject to call for military purposes and its owner knows where and when he must bring it.

When Count Von Moltke, the chief of the German general staff, nephew of the great strategist of 1870, receives from the kaiser through the minister of war the order to mobilize he opens one of the famous "sealed envelopes" in the guarded steel vaults of the general staff headquarters, containing the mobilization plans for war with every nation or alliance. The proclamation is brief. The calendar ceases to exist; everything military is dated first, second, third day of mobilization.

Three days to Move a Corps.

Germany has twenty-six army corps in the first line and sixteen in the second and third lines. Each corps consists of 41,000 men and 14,000 horses. In single marching column a corps is thirty-five miles long. It takes 125 railroad trains to move such a division. The military schedule calls for a train starting every thirty minutes and for forty-eight trains in opposite directions every twenty-four hours on a double-track line. That is the maximum. Generally it is estimated that only forty trains will be run every twenty-four hours. It would therefore take three days to move an army corps upon such a line. The average running time, inclusive of stops, call for seventeen miles an hour.

Cremation in Germany.

Berlin recently opened its first crematorium. The building is the second of its kind in Prussia, and its predecessor was completed only a couple of months ago. As a matter of fact, cremation is thought to be a questionable proceeding by a large part of the population, as the regulations as to the formalities exacted before permission for cremation clearly testify. In Prussia a man may be cremated only if he states it as his emphatic wish in his will, or when he signs a separate statement attested by a commissioner of oaths. The first cremation in the Berlin crematorium took place only a short time ago, and the occasion was taken to point out in the press that incineration is a cheap and becoming ceremony. The fee is $12.50, and the cost of a shelf for the urn is only $5, which is much cheaper than the rental of a grave in any public cemetery.

Accommodating.

Mr. Levi is a kind-hearted, conscientious man, an example of what Maeterlinck calls "our anxious morality." But he is also German, and spends the pennies hard. He has a hired man who says, "Mr. Levi's queer; he wants me to work all the time he has me hired for." Mr. Levi also has a young horse that balks.

The other day the horse stopped in the midst of a furrow, with weeks of work ahead.

"If you would just let me take a whip to him once!" the hired man expostulated, exasperated and yet dominated by the other's point of view.

Mr. Levi looked around him uneasily; stood first on one foot, then on the other. "Ain't there nothin' else you could be doin'?" he asked, "till he gets ready to start?"—Harper's Magazine.

Empty Icehouses.

About every ice house in the county is empty. Though we have several times had a good taste of winter the temperature was not low enough or the cold snap was of too short duration to form ice of sufficient thickness to enable the tens of thousands of county who have icehouses to fill them.
